HIGHLAND
SINGLE MALT
SCOTCH WHISKY

Speyburn Single Malt Scotch Whisky was first distilled on the 15th December 1897. The distillery owner, John Hopkins, defied the odds to make sure that the first cask was filled in this year, to mark the Diamond Jubilee of Queen Victoria.

The picturesque distillery lies on the northern edge of Rothies, in the heart of the Speyside region. It's here that our whisky quietly matures in American oak casks in traditional stone-built warehouses. And very little has changed in our distilling methods over the last hundred years.

The result is a classic Speyside single malt that's bright, golden-amber in colour. On the nose, Bradán Orach reveals green apples, honey, lemon and floral vanilla spices. It's a wonderfully balanced, full-bodied whisky, with a long-lasting finish.

- Distilled in the famous Speyside region of the Scottish Highlands using the fresh, clear waters of the Granty Burn.
- Bradán Orach is gaelic for Golden Salmon.
- Speyburn Highland Single Malt Scotch Whisky was first distilled on the 15th of December 1897, the diamond jubilee year of Queen Victoria.
