International Superstar shares love for Writers' Tears whiskey

Walsh Whiskey Distillery's Writers' Tears Copper Pot has caught the attention of an international superstar, who couldn't help but share her love of our whiskey.

American singer songwriter Katy Perry posted a picture of a bottle of Writers' Tears on her Instagram story last night for all of her 60 million followers to see. Captioned 'drink up', the photo has since been shared across social media, hopefully winning lots of new fans for our exquisite whiskey.

Writers' Tears Copper Pot is a unique style of whiskey embedded in history. A marriage of both Malt and Pot Still whiskey, distilled exclusively in copper pots, the style became known as 'the Champagne of Irish whiskey' and is said to have been a source of great inspiration for many of Ireland's great writers.

It seems it's still a source of inspiration for our creative set!

Sláinte Katy, we hope you'll come visit us soon and we can show you how it's made.

Writer's Tears Copper Pot

Truer labels have never been written (or gracefully slapped onto a finer-looking bottle): "I traded my tomorrow to remain in yesterday... whiskey tears are fading now, each one cries another day." Waxing poetic on imbibers' dreams of yesteryear aside, this stellar blended whiskey contains pot still and malt whiskey. Sure, it's aged impeccably and laced with ginger-y, honey-studded notes, but what makes it a real standout in our collection is that it comes to its maturation in flame-charred bourbon barrels. The result? A beautiful amber hue and an unforgettable taste.

Underneath the Obama pictures on the wall is a cocktail area that Kauffman says production uses "for what we call Scotch o'clock" (i.e. whenever the workday is done). Kauffman is a fan of Sheep Dip Whiskey, but the bar also includes a brand called Writers Tears. "It tastes like the deepest, darkest parts of you [have been] poured over ice," she deadpans.

Inside Marta Kauffman's 'Grace and Frankie' Office

After years spent on such shows as "Friends" and "Related," Marta Kauffman knows that idle hands are not conducive to her productivity. Her corner office on the Paramount lot, down the hall from the writers room for Howard J. Morris and her Netflix series "Grace and Frankie," is filled with lots of fun stuff: snacks, drawers of Silly Putty and adult coloring books, comfy furniture, a bar, and even a broken exercise bike that she swears she'll start using after her upcoming knee replacement surgery. "When you keep your hands busy doing something like this, I find it fuels your brain," says Kauffman, who knitted 14 hats during her final two weeks on "Friends" — gifts she bestowed to those writers.
